

Rule of Law and Human Capital Debates

The rule of law forms the cornerstone of a stable and just society. A robust legal framework not only instills confidence among citizens and businesses but also attracts foreign investments, spurring economic growth. Upholding the rule of law ensures equal protection and opportunities for all, fostering a sense of trust, stability, and transparency that further strengthens the nation's social fabric.

Likewise, human capital in Slovakia is a critical asset that underpins the nation's economic and social development. With a well-educated and skilled workforce, Slovakia has the potential to drive innovation and attract foreign investments, contributing to sustained economic growth. As Slovakia grapples with demographic shifts and global competition, it is imperative to recognize that the retention of its youthful talent pool is a fundamental catalyst for progress.

Together with partner organisations, we have prepared two position papers on the topics of Rule of Law and Human Capital. In the upcoming policy talks, we will be asking candidates from relevant democratic political parties about their views on these crucial topics.
